Tom Sayers and the Benicia Boy-Forthcoming Contest for the Championship of the Hemispheres. the city.

Tom Sayers and the Benicia Boy—Forthcoming

Contest for the Championship of the Hemispheres.

As the hour approaches for definite information on the subject of the match between Sayers and Heenan for £200 and the Championship of England, the interest of sporting circles, and indeed, of the public at large, continues to increase, and from the feeling that has already exhibited itself upon the subject, it is evident that the excitement of the contest will exceed that of any previous event in the history of the recent rivalries between Great Britain and the United States. May, even the interest which was exhibited throughout the country on the occasion of the memorable Sullivan and Hyer fight, will be exceeded by the furore that will attend the Sayers and Heenan contest. Both men are the finest specimens of their class in either land, and while the anxiety of puguilistic circles has been at the highest pitch for a long while to see them come together, the general audience of the country is by no means indifferent to the contest. While the fighters will enjoy it with a professional instinct, the general audience will look on, and regard it as a fortunate opportunity to test and probably refute the accusation of the London Times, that the American physical organization is much inferior to that of Britain, and that deterioration is the law with animal life on this continent.

It is true that the fight between Sayers and the city.

It is untriving that a people with so much common sense as the English, should retain so many ancient and useless forms and ceremonies, and dress up their officials like harlequins and clowns at a fandango. But civilization has not much to boast over savage life, as respects georgas and claptraps. Mankind have always been tickled with a tail like a peacock's, and I suppose always will be.

BY STATE AUTHORITY.

A CASH CAPITAL, Secretary.

It is true that the Boyer and indeed, of the public at large, continues to increase, and dress up their officials like harlequins and clemans at a fandango is the law with animal life on this continent. It is true that the fight between Sayers and

It is true that the fight between Sayers and Heenan, end as it may, will not entirely settle this question; not half so well indeed, as it was settled at Lexington, Bunker Hill, and New Orleans; still it will be a big piece of proof toward it if we can put our young Achilles against the Ajax who has been winnowed from the chaff and grain of twenty-six millions of people as its best specimen, and make him win the battle. That would be a result which, though thousands upon thousands here would not in the least promote it, yet of which every person in the land might many shrewd old sportsmen here who prefer the redoubtable English champion over the stalwart and fresh young representative of our ring. They prefer to repose upon his tried qualities of science, generalship, and courage, to making a venture on the chances of a mere promising young man, who, thus far, has not won a battle.

The comparison of the physical contrasts between the two men, and which in hight alone exhibits the remarkable extreme between six feet two and a half inches for Heenan, against five feet eight and a half for Sayers, has brought up a discussion in puglific circles here in regard to the fighting weight of Sayers, which has resulted in the establishment of an impression that the Champion of England, instead of scaling 152 pounds when in true battle trim, really weighs some one hundred and sixty-five or one hundred and sixty-five or one hundred and sixty-eight pounds whenever he toes the score. Those, however, who contend for the accuracy of the lighter figures, as representing the fighting maximum of Sayers, adhere to them principally on the reiterated statement to that effect, which regularly appears in the columns of that admirable sporting record, Bell's Lije, whenever it reports Sayers' fights. Notwithstanding this high authority, however, the other party can the made to believe that the reverse which the made to believe that the reverse which the statement to that admirable sporting record, Bell's Lije, whenever it reports Sayers' fights. Notwithstanding this high authority, however, the other party can the made to believe that the reverse which ever it reports Sayers' fights. Notwithstanding this high authority, however, the other party can not be made to believe that the prowess which took down the pride of Paddock, Jones, Poulson, and the gigantic Slasher, can wrap itself up in so light a measure as is represented, and persist in it that Bell's Life is deceived by Sayers, and that, as the Champion is never required to weigh before his battles, he may foist upon the reporters what weight he choose. There is much plausibility in this view of the case, and the more one turns it over and applies its philosophy to the turns it over and applies its philosophy to the wonderful career of the English champ his victories over the heaviest and most terrible fighters of the time, the more one is disposed to accept the fact which it sustains. Be that fact, however, as it may, it is certain that Sayers, whether a stone heavier or lighter than he reports in his last battle, and was already beginning to Cooking, Parlor and Heating ing in February, with Aaron Jones. As Aaron, however, has handsomely consented to waive his right to the first chance at Sayers, out of pure concession to the anxiety in this country that the American Champion should be the first to "get on" for the English belt, the British Champion is by this time preparing for the prospective clash between himself and Heenan, that will probably come off next May. The editor of Bell's Life, who holds $750 from this office to back the claims of Heanan of Heenan, will supervise the making of the match and the drawing of the articles; and as the forfeiture of Jones was sent to him early in October, we may reasonably look, by the first steamer from the other side, for an official notice of the match at the head of the pugilistic records of the match at the nead of the puglistic records in the above named paper. The news of this fact will be received with great rejoicing by Heenan's friends; and we suppose it will be of-ficially enjoyed by a solemn tournament of all the pugs at Hoym's theater, in the Bowery.

P. S.—As we write, our letters by the Vander-bilt come in to inform us that Jones' match for uary is set aside, and that the Heenan match with Sayers is on. Sayers has already covered Heenan's first deposit of $250, and articles were to be signed between the parties on the 5th of this month. "Censor" will probably toss for

How the Lord Mayor of London is Elected.

A London correspondent of the Century thus tells the modus operandi of choosing the Lord Mayor of London. It is novel enough:
The only persons who have a right to vote for

The only persons who have a right to vote for Lord Mayor are members of what is called the "livery of London," that is, members elect, and belonging to all of the trades Societies.

The election is held at Guildhall, and in front of the building a fence is built, with a gate for each society. An officer called a beadle stands at each gate, and wears an embroidered cloak, and carries in one hand a gilt rod, with a backet-shaped butt-end to it, called a mace. He is supposed to know all the members of his Society. shaped butt-end to it, called a mace. He is supposed to know all the members of his Society, and theoretically, no others are admitted—but practically, those whose curiosity, like mine, was an overmatch for their modesty, contrived to get in. After the arrival of the Lord Mayor, Common Councilmen, Sheriff, and his deputies, with sundry other officials, all rigged out in their gorgeous, fantastic gold lace, fur and feather plumage, they adjourned to an adjoining church, where the Lord Mayor's chaplain preached a sermon, which was very good in one respect, as it was not more than fifteen minutes long. All hands then went back to the hall, which by that time was filled with people.

It was then announced that the meeting would proceed to elect a Lord Mayor, and sundry can proceed to elect a Lord Mayor, and sundry can-lidates were named, and as each name was painted on a board and held up alternately above painted on a board and held up alternately above the heads of the crowd on the platform, the friends of each candidate would hurrah and swing their haus. After putting up first one board and then snother, until it was very apparent whose name elicited the most noise, and induced the largest number to swing their hate, it was deleted that Mr. John Carter was duly elected Lord Mayor of the city. Mr. Caster came forward and made a short speech, and the performance ended.

Mr. Seibert presented petitions from several citizens of the First Ward, praying for relief from erroneous assessment, which were referred; also one from Mr. Wishmire, asking for relief from tax assessed against him on a mill which was burnt. Mr. Seibert moved that the allowance be made, It was opposed by Mr. Cottrell, Mr. Haughey and Mr. Vandegrift, as involving a principle. Every man who met with a loss by fire, by water, by burglars, or any way, might fire, by water, by burglars, or any way, might come up and ask the same thing. Mr. Locke thought the Council had not power to remit the tax, an opinion in which Mr. Elliott, the City Attorney, concurred. The motion to remit was tending to oppose the whole thing, he was care-less about it. He was opposed to buncombe, and this was a buncombe matter entirely.

Mr. Wallace moved to amend by inserting one hundred copies in Celtic, one hundred in French, one hundred in Hindoo, one hundred in Choctaw, and one thousand in English. We have Irish, French and other citizens who have as much claim upon the Council as the Germans. If bun combe was to be the order of the day, let it b gone into in a lineral spirit, giving all classes the benefit. Mr. Locke moved to strike out English and insert Pottowattomie.

Mr Wallace opposed the amendment of Mr. Locke. He would go farther and insist that the Marshal be compelled to give every man in the town a copy of the laws, and that they be com-pelled to read them.

A short cassage at arms took place between Mr. Seibert and Mr. Cottrell, which was checked y the Mayor.

Mr. Vandegrift moved to lay the report and ending amendments on the table, which was lost

Hints to Immigrants. The Placerville Observer supplies the following hints to immigrants seeking opportunities for em-

There are upon the eastern side of the Sierra Nevada a chain of the most luxuriant and beautiful valleys conceivable, extending along the en-tire western rim of the "Great Basin." These tire western rim of the "Great Basin." These valleys present many inducements for location and settlement. They are exceedingly healthy, and but little impeded by snow. They are well watered by numerous mountain streams, offering such advantage for the manufacture of butter as make it the best dairying section in the world, with the market convenient and prices high. There are ferry and turnpike privileges to acquire, and ranches to claim, to which a squatter's title would be as perfect as he could desire. The rich mines continually developing in that section will undoubtedly attract large numbers into the region containing them, causing its rapid settlement, and, consequently, a great increase in the value of choice locations of ferries, roads and ranches.

Red and gravelly soil, if it can be irrigated, is superior to any other for producing grapes, the premium vineyards of the State being upon such lands. The profits of a vineyard are according to its age, and vary from $300 to $800 an acre per annum. A single acre will make four hundred gallons of wine, beside brandy and vinegar enough to pay all its expenses. It would be an easy matter for any one possessed of a very small capital to thus create a valuable homestead while adding to the true wealth of the country. When adding to the true wealth of the country. When the value of these locations become properly appreciated, the vine-clad hills of El Dorado will the value of these locations become properly appreciated, the vine-clad hills of El Dorado will become as celebrated for their beauty and productions as the old and extensive wine-producing countries of the East.

There are many other cocupations, which the new comer with a small capital can pursue with profit, that we have not time to point out. The alvantages of an agricultural over a mining cocupation are apparent to all. Vearsof the severest toil and privation may be spent in the mines with out its adequate reward, while if the same amount of labor were spent in improving an agricultural homestead, it would make a property which would place the owner far above want, with a valuable heritage for his children.

OBSTITICATE OF DR. HAYS It is well known that the medicinal effect of Protoxide of Iron is lost by even a very brief exposure to air, and that tomaintain a solution of Protoxide of Iron, without further exidation, has been deemed impossible.

In the Peruvian Sirup this desirable point is attained by commination in A way sufform sixup which may replace all the proto carbonates, citrates, and tartrates of the Materia Medica.
